FASCISTS PRESS ON

Report Hitler's Next Drive
Will Be Against Hungary's
Wheat Granaries

(By International News Service)

A wave of suicides in Nazified Austria brought death today to former Vice-Chancellor Major Emil Sey and his family, as the eyes of Europe shifted to Spain, where Fascist legions pressed forward with their "knock out" drive toward the Mediterranean.

Developments:

Paris—France massed troops, guns and warplanes along her Pyrenees border and Premier Leon Blum sought national unity. Political circles buzzed with reports Reichsruener Hitler's next drive will be against the wheat granaries of Hungary.

London—In an urgent diplomatic conversation with Great Britain, France revised her demand for joint action to "neutralize" the insurgent controlled Balearic Island.

Hendaye—Disorder and confusion were reported spreading throughout Loyalist Spain as insurgent forces, heavily re-inforced by German and Italian troops in supplies, advanced to within 40 miles of the Mediterranean.

Prague—The government agency announced Soviet Russia and France have both given Czechoslovakia formal assurance they will furnish military assistance in event of aggression or interference from abroad.

Newportville Auxiliary Has Enjoyable Banquet

NEWPORTVILLE, Mar. 16—The Ladies Scout Auxiliary held its first annual banquet in Newportville Church basement, Friday evening. The table was attractively decorated, and the menu was planned by Mrs. J. Gehrmann, president, who also was the hostess at the affair.

Those who attended: Mr. and Mrs. J. Gehrmann, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. C. Everett, Mr. and Mrs. H. Backhouse, Mr. and Mrs. F. Kohler, Mr. and Mrs. R. Loper, Mr. and Mrs. W. Clifton, Mr. and Mrs. N. Muth, Mr. and Mrs. McShea, Mr. and Mrs. H. Brambley, Mr. and Mrs. Reitter, Mr. and Mrs. Becker, L. Clark, Miss E. Raven.

The young women who assisted were: The Misses Ruth Gehrmann, Thelma Hart, Evelyn Muth and Dorothy Gehrmann.

Name Two Bristol Men In Big Alcohol Ring

Two Bristol men are named among the leaders of the alleged big bootleg ring which is accused of having defrauded the government out of millions of dollars. The Bristol men named are Gus and Bert Avella.

Six men guided the complex web of bootleg operations throughout four States from 1934 to 1936, it was stated at the trial in Philadelphia yesterday.

Twenty of the 91 placed on trial on conspiracy charges have already admitted their part in a precisely planned and minutely organized network of stills, producers, repairmen and distributors. Fifteen others offered no defense before Judge Albert B. Maris at the Customs House.

Of the remaining 56 standing trial, Gleason said the key figures are:

Benjamin Fogel, Walnut street, near 47th, accused of supervising distribution; Louis Gordon and his two sons, Herman and Morris, of Trenton, named as heading construction and repair of stills; Gus and Bert Avella, Bristol, accused of superintending operation of the stills, hidden on farms and in apparently "empty" city buildings.

Actual presentation of the Government's mass of evidence began with the testimony of Harold Hunsicker, Federal Alcohol Tax raider. He described seizure in 1934 of stills on two Bucks county farms owned by Dominick Kluznick and at a plant at 56 Market street, Trenton, allegedly operated by the Gordons.

Kluznick has been sentenced on the charge of operating the stills, but is on trial with the others for conspiring to defraud the Government of tax revenue.

P. T. A. TO MEET

Commissioners Award Contract For New Barn

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 16—Bucks County Commissioners yesterday awarded the contract to rebuild the Bucks County Home dairy barn, destroyed by fire December 6, 1937, to David D. Nyce, Doylestown, the low bidder, for $7941.11.

The home farm is located in Doylestown Township. The highest bid was $11,761. The fire loss paid by insurance companies, including the barn, produce and machinery, amounted to $10,917.70, and was paid by insurance companies.

LOYAL REPUBLICAN CLUB NAMES NEW PRESIDENT

Harris Holmes, Doylestown,
Chosen to Head Group
For Coming Year

TO STAGE CARD PARTY

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 16—Harris Holmes, well known local manufacturer, has been elected president of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County for the coming year. The election took place at the club's headquarters at Buckingham, where a new section to their home was formally opened. The club house will now seat 150 people.

Other officers elected include the following: Vice-presidents, Charles Smith, Fallsington; Carroll Michener, Doylestown R. D.; secretary, Curtis Lyons, Doylestown; treasurer, Willard Dimmig, Doylestown; trustees, Edward B. Watson, Albert B. Darrah and Arthur C. Shaw.

The club has enjoyed a remarkable growth until the present membership with 35 new members received last night, now numbers 600. A goal of 1,000 has been set to be reached by November.

Speakers at last night's meeting included former District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn; Assistant District Attorney Willard Curtin, Morrisville; Sheriff William L. Stackhouse, Doylestown; Assemblymen Thomas Stockham, Morrisville, and William Yeakel, Perkasie.

The club is planning for a card party to be given in the Buckingham Grange Hall on April 29th.

Bucks County Continues As A Separate District

Twenty-five State Senators will be elected next November according to present district lines, as a result of the Dauphin County Court invalidating the Senatorial reapportionment act of 1937.

The court, at Harrisburg, made permanent a temporary injunction restraining the State Election Bureau from certifying candidates for nomination at the May primary on basis of the new setup authorized by the Legislature. One-half of the 50 Senate seats, in the even-numbered districts are to be filled this year.

The decision, announced by President Judge William M. Hargest, was based upon the same condition that caused the court two weeks ago to declare unconstitutional an act for reapportioning House of Representatives districts. The Borough of Sewickley Heights, Allegheny county, was not included in any proposed new Senatorial district, and in two proposed districts of that county the area was not mapped out contiguously and compactly, as required by the State Constitution.

Bucks county will continue to be a Senatorial district by itself. Under the reapportionment Bucks was combined with Lehigh county in a single district, the joint territory being Democratic.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Significant Tax Revolt

Washington, March 16. THE outspoken views on taxation recently expressed by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, have not received as much attention as they deserve. They not only are indicative of the final form of the 1938 tax bill but are highly significant of the situation as it exists in the Congress and in the Democratic party.

PERHAPS, without conscious intent, though Mr. Harrison is far too experienced a man not to know the political import of his own words his utterances practically proclaim what for some time has

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY

An interesting program is being arranged for an open meeting of the Morrisville Father's Association which will be held in the high school auditorium Monday night. The winners of the Father's Association basketball league and the runners-up will be guests of the organization and the followers of the league teams from Yardley, Langhorne and Fallsington are invited to attend.

Gold basketballs will be presented to the members of the winning team. The players on the team which finished second will also receive awards. William W. O'Neill, who was in charge of the league, will make the presentations.

During the evening, pictures of the Olympic games will be shown, and Howard Kline, a hypnotist, will entertain. Music will be furnished by the Morrisville High School orchestra, under the direction of Miss Catherine Moyer.

William Schofield, Sr., Markus Ketcham and O'Neill comprise the committee in charge of the meeting.

C. Marvin Young was named to interview Mayor William Burgess in reference to the Father's Association taking charge of feeding the Boy Scouts who come to Morrisville next month for the annual Scouting Day program.

Mr. Green, Norristown, a representative of the Bell Telephone Company, showed several reels of sound pictures of the telephone industry at a meeting of the Seabury Farmers' Club which was entertained in Trinity Hall, at Solebury, by Mr. and Mrs. William Jaeger and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Shupe. Approximately 100 persons saw the pictures which proved quite interesting.

Twenty-seven more motorists were arrested during the past week by officers of the Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police. This list included twelve speeders, who paid fines of $10 and costs in addition to having their names submitted to the State Department for a hearing to show cause why their driver's licenses should not be revoked for 90 days.

Newtown Garden Club met at the club rooms Friday afternoon with 15 members present. An invitation from the Ambler School of Horticulture, to visit the gardens at that place this Spring was read.

Miss Anna W. Smith gave a very interesting talk on the different trees and shrubs that have been planted

M. R. REITER PRESENTS PROGRAM FOR ROTARIANS

Dr. Luther Harr Unable To Speak, Due To Attack
Of Illness

SPEAKERS ARE LISTED

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 16—Mansoor R. Reiter, past president of Morrisville Rotary Club, presented a substitute program for local Rotarians, when city treasurer of Philadelphia and former state secretary of banking, Dr. Luther Harr, was unable to speak due to illness.

The weekly dinner session was held at Lehigh Farms, Thursday.

Motion pictures of various activities of the Morrisville schools and a safety film were shown by Melvin Walper, a member of the local high school faculty.

Visitors attending the meeting included Lee Stone, of Trenton; J. C. Brown, of New York, and Walter Jave, of Akron, Ohio. Mr. Stone was a guest of his brother, John Stone; Mr. Brown was Stanley Reuton's.

in the yard of the Friends' meeting house recently. She also told of the trees and older shrubbery on the meeting house grounds and gave the names of all the trees and shrubs found there.

Miss Smith also displayed several specimen branches and cones of evergreen trees. Some had been sent to her from California.

Two games were played under the direction of Mrs. Horace A. Effrig.

Mrs. Effrig and Mrs. Fretz, who had charge of the programs the past three months, served sandwiches and tea at the close of the meeting.

MOTOR POLICE START FIRST-AID COURSE

Ten Members Attend First
Class Opening at Doylestown Barracks

IS A TEN-WEEK COURSE

Pennsylvania Motor Police from the Doylestown and Oxford Valley barracks went to school in Doylestown last night starting a 10-week course in first aid given by the American Red Cross.

The advanced training in first aid is part of the state-wide safety crusade under the guidance of Admiral P. W. Foote, Commissioner of the Pennsylvania Motor Police.

George Dorfner, wire chief for the Bell Telephone Company, was the volunteer instructor at last night's opening session. Ten members of the Doylestown and Oxford Valley units attended the two-hour class at the Doylestown headquarters of the Motor Police.

Each Tuesday evening, for the next ten weeks, these police will study first aid methods. Upon completion of this course, similar classes will be arranged for the remaining members of the two barracks.

The Red Cross course of training outlined for the Motor Police includes instructions in first aid, anatomy and physiology of the body, dressing and bandages, treatment of wounds and shock, artificial respiration, injuries to bones, common emergencies, treatment for poisons and proper use of first aid kits.

15 Dead In Tornado

St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 16—Fifteen persons were dead today in the wake of a tornado that roared up the Mississippi River Valley through Arkansas, Missouri and Illinois.

Hundreds in its path were injured, scores of buildings crushed, and spun about like toys, and more than $2,000,000 damage inflicted. The town worst hit by the storm was Belleville, Illinois, where seven were killed. Six more died in Kenneth, Missouri and one each in Glenview and Centerville, Illinois.

BURLINGTON FIREMEN FIGHT 2-ALARM BLAZE

More Than $3,000 Damage
Done in Super Building,
Early This Morning

AUTOS ARE SCORCHED

BURLINGTON, N. J., Mar. 16—A two-alarm fire aroused 100 firemen of Burlington's six companies this morning at 6.30, the firemen fighting for more than one hour a stubborn blaze in the Super Building, at High and Federal streets. The loss is estimated at more than $3,000.

The office and supply room of the Burlington County district office of Works Progress Administration, located in the building, were gutted, and damage done to some equipment in an office of Government Geodetic Survey group. A portion of the garage of Edward Super was burned, the walls being damaged and automobiles scorched.

The building, owned by the Mechanics Bank, is rented by Super, who sublets a portion to the other businesses and organizations.

The fire in the two-story brick building, was first noticed by Ralph Rodman, a post office employee, who was passing. Two alarms were sent in, and firemen from the six local companies responded, attaching hose to water mains, and also using chemicals. It is believed that the blaze started in the supply room where paint and soft coal are stored. Spontaneous combustion is given as the cause of the fire. The store room is located on the ground floor.

In the WPA headquarters, records and equipment, including shovels, etc., were destroyed. Papers and other equipment of the Geodetic Survey were also lost in the blaze.

RECEIVE BIRTHDAY CAKE

A fitting celebration of the 19th anniversary of the organization of the American Legion took place in the home of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, last evening, when more than 100 members of the local post and auxiliary assembled.

Adjutant Robert Downing served as master of ceremonies, with Jonathan Miller, senior vice commander, presiding at the business meeting of the post in the absence of commander, William Riley, who is ill.

During the business period the progress of the post was traced, with the minutes of the original meeting being read. It was recalled that the local post was formed in the community house, Dorrance street, with the post headquarters in their order being the Gallagher & Gallagher building, Mill and Cedar streets; the building now occupied as the Travel Club home, Cedar street; and the present home at 619 Radcliffe street.

The past commanders of the post were called upon, these mentioning outstanding pieces of work during their respective terms of office: Jacob C. Schmidt, Jr., Samuel Hardy, W. Ray Smith, Robert Downing, Ralph Scheffey, Robert Clark, Jr., William Mack, William Griffith.

A portion of the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Robert Downing, president of the local Auxiliary, she congratulating the post on its attainments, and wishing it success in the future. Mrs. Downing also presented past presidents of the auxiliary, each making a few pertinent remarks: Miss Emily Bracken, Mrs. Robert Clark, Sr., Mrs. Elizabeth Delker, Mrs. Walter Strouse, Mrs. Benjamin Ahart, Mrs. Harold H. Dettmer, Mrs. Dorothy Peckenburg, Mrs. Harry Wessaw, Miss Elizabeth Rafferty.

On behalf of the Auxiliary Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Delker presented a birthday cake, topped by 19 candles, to the post members.

Entertainment followed, with the gathering singing war-time songs, and the American Legion Cadet Drum and Bugle Corps, under leadership of Commander Charles Brodie, giving selections showing progress of the corps. Charles Ratlike entertained with a humorous selection.

At the conclusion of the program the gathering stood in silence in honor of the memory of the late B. Franklin Gilkeson, first commander of the Post.

Music and dancing followed, with refreshments of ice cream and cake being served. At 12 midnight, the women and men listened to the radio broadcast which featured addresses by national commander of the Legion, Daniel Doherty, and national president of the auxiliary, Mrs. Malcolm Douglass. Entertainment from Hollywood was included in this program, likewise.

Tobacco In His Coffee

By "The Stroller"

Did you hear the story about a certain "hubby" who sometimes tries to be useful and makes the coffee for the morning meal?

Well, one morning recently, this particular individual was making the coffee and without looking he just dipped and dipped the spoon into what he thought was the coffee can.

Right beside the coffee can sat the hubby's tobacco can and after the concoction had been boiling for a time, the aroma did not smell just like coffee usually smells, and so "wifey" made a check-up.

It was soon discovered that the helpful "hubby" had dipped out of the tobacco can instead of the coffee can.

He has not aided in making coffee since.

JUDGE BOYER HOLDS BEQUEST TO CHURCH IS A VALID ONE

Vandegrift Bequest to Grace
Church, Hulmeville, Ruled
Charitable One

TO BE PAID AT ONCE

Bequest For Non-Sectarian Church Declared Illegal and Void

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 16—Judge Calvin S. Boyer yesterday filed an opinion and decrees in the estate of Russell L. Vandegrift in a declaratory judgment proceeding to have the will of the decedent interpreted and construed.

The court in its opinion, held that a bequest of $10,000 to the Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, of Hulmeville, in trust for the payment of the salary of the vicar, is a valid, charitable bequest payable immediately.

The decedent directed his executors to hold and operate his estate for a period of 60 years after his death and then directed that a union, non-sectarian church be erected on his property known as the Gasline Farm and the income from the balance to be used for the maintenance of the church.

Judge Boyer held that the bequest was illegal and void because it did not vest in any person during the 60-year period and, therefore, violated the rule against perpetuities. Consequently, the entire residuary estate will descend to the decedent's heirs under the intestate laws.

Mrs. Margaret Barkley Is Claimed By Death; Aged 89

HULMEVILLE, Mar. 16—Born in this borough March 17, 1849, Mrs. Margaret Douglass Barkley died in Trenton, N. J., yesterday shortly before noon.

Although Mrs. Barkley had resided at the home of her nephew, Walter King, 148 S. Walter avenue, Trenton, for the past 28 years, she had spent most of her life in Hulmeville. She was the wife of the late William Barkley.

The deceased, who was a member of Neshauney Methodist Church, here, had been in ill health for some time, and had been confined to her bed for the past five weeks.

Several nieces and nephews survive, those residing in this section including: Mrs. William Claus, Mrs. Frank Forker, George Douglass, and William Douglass, Hulmeville; and Howard Douglass, Ambler.

The Rev. Robert H. Conly will officiate at the funeral service on Friday afternoon at two o'clock in Neshauney M. E. Church. Burial will be made in Beechwood Cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home of Charles Haefner, Thursday evening.

Another Dollar Day To Be Announced Here In Very Near Future

Because of public demand, the Mill Street Business Men's Association of Bristol will hold another Dollar Day in the near future. The demand for the day is attributed to the outstanding success of the last Dollar Day which was held February 17, under the auspices of the Association.

During the last Dollar Day, thousands of dollars worth of merchandise were moved in that gigantic bargain day offering. As a result, orders for considerable goods were sent from the member stores of the Association to replace these stocks.

IN CONFIDENT KEY

The piano business is doing all right. Apparently, the blight of federal interference has not laid too heavy a restraint on the expansive attitude of this branch of American industry. A leading piano manufacturer reports that, for the fifth consecutive year, piano sales are showing a substantial gain over the preceding period. He attributes this to the nation's growing interest in music, the new styles introduced to enhance piano popularity, and the novel methods of teaching that take the drudgery out of practice.

This is indeed an odd situation. With public confidence reported near an all-time low, the American spirit of gaiety is yet making itself heard in an ever increasing volume of cheerfully struck notes, on a par with a bird in the wilderness. Conceivably, even the small boy—the traditional foe of the piano—may have somewhat relaxed his anti-practicing prejudice. If this is so, it may be generally true that emotionally high-strung personalities of all ages are finding more and more of an outlet for their nerve tension in impressing their moods on sympathetically responsive keys.

After all, there was something positively forbidding and inhibiting about the sternly upright old-fashioned piano that challenged the very thought of relaxation. In contrast, the new grand and console models fairly invite it.

Insolent as music may offer an orientation from sadness, the pianos' place in the current economic scheme seems widely indicated. Perhaps there should be one in every huddled businessman's office to offer individual release from industrial weltschmerz. Thus, too, may be resolved all excess animosity toward the Administration, as executives pick up happily and patiently for the lost chord of undaunted expectancy.

LESSONS IN PEACE

The first lessons in love and hate, the first attempts at control of primitive impulses come from the family circle during a child's earliest years; the home atmosphere, therefore, must be one of sympathy and serenity and love, not of anxiety, suspicion and hate. And when the child goes off to school, he must be met there by peace education, a course which thus far has not been included as a mandatory part of the school curriculum; agitation in favor of the inauguration of such instruction in the public school system of the nation has been started by the high school teachers' group in New York and may prove to be the beginning of a new idea in education.

Believing that the matter of war and peace is of vital concern to this and future generations, it is proposed to teach world history, civics and current events in a light which shall show the utter futility of war, the meaningless of such slogans as "war to end wars," and "war to make the world safe for democracy."

The time to work for peace is not after war breaks out, but before. Every day should be a peace day. As one of the New York commissioners of education expressed it, "Peace education could become as integral a factor in the general course as is character building."

In lower nine, Marie was concerned with the morning's arrival in Los Angeles. She anticipated every event long before it occurred, and planned every detail of the effect she hoped to create. She now consulted her husband. "What dress shall I wear in the morning, Harry? The purple crepe is so soiled from yesterday and the orchid chiffon is ruined, I'm afraid. I doubt if it will dry clean, even. The beige satin is just as bad, from wearing it today in the terrible heat and dust. Do you suppose I should wear the rose lace in the morning? It's pretty dressy, but I do want to make a good impression on Aunt Cissy and Uncle Mack. You know, they have a big estate in California. Do you suppose they will send a chauffeur to meet us, or come to the station? I wish I knew what to expect."

"How do I know what your relatives might do?" He was not optimistic.

"Harry dear—" she chided. "Well, do I know even what you are going to do next? I do not. You keep me on the jump like popcorn on a hot stove. I'll be glad when we get back home and into the old rut again."

"Why, aren't you having a grand time?" her voice was almost tearful.

"Not so hot. Oh, yes, it's plenty hot, all right—hot like a furnace. But the people on this train are a bunch of highbats, if you ask me. Best people! If they're the best ones, I don't care about playing around with the worst. The men won't talk more than a few words at a time. Rush off as if they had something important to do. Even that porter looks over my head as if he didn't see me, or through me as if I wasn't there. If he expects a generous tip from me, he has a surprise coming to him!"

"Oh, but Harry, you will have to give him a good tip to keep up our reputation," Marie reminded him in alarm. "We are supposed to have plenty of money, traveling on an extra-fare train."

"Reputation with who?" Harry demanded.

Marie ignored the grammatical error in her greater concern for the need of convincing Harry of the importance of their reputation. "Why—why, everyone. It's the principle of the thing," vaguely.

"Principle nothing! Who'll know how much I tip the porter, after we leave the train? We'll never see him again, or anyone else on this train, probably; and you won't catch me crying about it, either."

"But Harry, you don't understand," she implored sweetly.

"Don't say that again! I've heard it enough. Anyone would think you spoke a foreign language, the way you say that to me. All I know is, you've got to drop a lot of your fool notions if you're going to be my wife."

"Why—I am your wife, now!"

"Sure. And that's just why you're going to change some of your ideas. I'm the boss in this family, Marie, and it's right that I should be. Didn't you promise to love and obey me when we were married the other night?"

"Of course," she laughed. "So did you promise to obey me." "Oh, well, that don't mean anything. It's just to balance the economy, make the same number of words in each sentence, or something foolish. It's all a form. But it was meant that the man should be the boss in every family—that is, all real men. Don't you think I'm a real man, honey?"

"Sure I do," she agreed readily, and snuggled close to him in the clamorous darkness. Marie was simple and gay and submissive. Nothing ever troubled her deeply or for long. A word or a gesture could dismiss any doubts of the moment for her. And it was just as well, if she expected to keep her contract for loving and obeying Harry Bortin until death parted them.

A robed figure swayed down the aisle and stopped at lower 3, parted the curtains and sat down on the edge of the berth. Gained set his bag in the far corner, meticulously arranged his clothes on the swaying hangers, set his shoes just under the edge of the curtain where they could be found by the porter and shined, and buttoned the curtains from the inside. Then he peered through the crack to look up and down the aisle, assured himself that no one was watching, lifted the curtains from below and stepped out into the aisle. He glanced around again and reached over to part the curtains of lower 2, and disappeared within.

He swung himself into the berth. It was dark and he reached out his hand cautiously. No one was there! Was it possible that Clarice had not come in yet? He thought he had allowed her ample time. Well, he would have to teach her to be more prompt, he smiled to himself. Of course, beautiful women always did consume hours in dressing and undressing. And Clarice was glorifying herself for her lover. But this delay was inexcusable. Perhaps she had delayed for a while, just to annoy him. Well, she was worth waiting an hour for—even two. He would leave the curtains open. She would be in soon, now.

He lay in patient anticipation, content with the course of events, thus far. Life was going to be pretty good for him. The wheels clicked faster in a sudden frenzy of speed, the car lurched, jerked to and fro. His body adjusted itself to the new motion. But it was pretty comfortable, after all. He had resolved many years ago that he would be able to afford the best, some day. He had done it. Click-click, clatter, thud, crack, squeak! His eyes closed with satisfied content, awaiting Clarice.

The Big Chief labored and snorted up the steep grade to the summit of the Sierras, groaning, shrieking, winding and unwinding, curling and uncurling, lashing its fiery-tipped tail, breathing fire and smoke from its nostrils.

The train raced, the hours dragged. A hundred souls slept on, confidently safe in the clutch of a thousand dangers. If any of those aboard lay awake, they were thinking and planning for the morrow—next week—next year. One of those who did not sleep that night was Kirby Elliott. He lay in his upper berth awake and fully dressed. His curtains were buttoned, but he had arranged them so that he could peer out into the car without being seen.

Another wide-awake passenger was Clarice. She was much too excited and bewildered for sleep. She lay staring into the darkness at the concave ceiling—in Yola Renee's drawing room. The fact was almost unbelievable. In the lower berth slept the most famous movie actress in the world, and on the couch against the little room slept her maid. Collette had been quite as astonished as Clarice at her mistress' sudden interest in the little blonde stranger. And Clarice lay rigidly in the darkness of the upper berth, striving to readjust her confused thoughts, reconciling herself to this sudden turn of events. For some reason which she could not explain, a benevolent providence guided her on this strange journey.

She had anticipated that it would be exciting, but never in her most fantastic dreams had she imagined anything to compare with this!

When the train slowed wearily and stopped at Barstow in the heart of the night and at the top of the world, Mervin Gaines awoke suddenly and raised the window shade to peer out. He wondered for an instant why he seemed to be turned around. He thought his window was at his left. It was now on his right.

Then he remembered, with a start. He was not in his own berth. He was on the opposite side of the car—in Clarice's berth. But where was she? He looked at his watch in the light which shone in from the station. Two-thirty! Something was queer.

Footsteps. A swishing sound, as of someone passing through the aisle. The curtains moved. In a panic he saw that they were not buttoned. He reached out quickly and held them together. No use to button them now. As soon as the train started again, and everyone had settled back to sleep, he would slip over into his own berth. He waited, taut with apprehension, a cold perspiration covering him from head to foot.

Where could Clarice be? What had she done? It was evident that she had either decided not to surrender to him, or had served as a tool for a more sinister purpose. But where could she have gone? Surely she could not admit to any of these passengers that she had given a strange man permission to share her berth, and appeal to them for protection. Far better to have come to him and explained that she could not go on with it.

At any rate, something was certainly queer, and he had to manage to get back where he belonged. He need not fear any accusation she might make against him so long as he was in his right place. He almost held his breath while he waited for the train to start. Must be the longest stop on the whole trip. The minutes dragged.

brief, in March, 1937, the President was in complete control and the idea of effectual opposition to his wishes was not seriously entertained.

NOW WE find not only the House in revolt on various matters, but the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee promulgating tax views known to be distasteful to the President. Senator Harrison urges a complete repeal of the undistributed profit tax and a broadening of the base so as to bring in a million or so taxpayers now exempt. Both these proposals have strong support in the Finance Committee and out, among Democratic Senators. Yet the first completely repudiates a tax policy to which Mr. Roosevelt still clings, while the second, by lowering the exemptions, would demonstrate painfully to a great many individuals the basic flaw in the New Deal philosophy that the poor get the free ride and only the rich have to pay, than which no more cruelly fallacious doctrine was ever preached.

THE Harrison argument for complete repeal of the surplus tax, which the House bill merely modifies, is that the plan has not worked and to retain it even in skeletonized form will be bad for business. Lowering exemptions, Mr. Harrison asserts, will not only provide needed revenue, but by making millions more people tax conscious strengthen public sentiment against waste and for economy. This coming at a time when Mr. Roosevelt is being prodded by his radical friends to launch another spending program and when he is backing a reorganization bill which utterly ignores the chance of annually saving $100,000,000, the proposal of Senator Harrison to tax lower bracket incomes so as to increase sentiment against spending can hardly please the White House.

THE situation in Congress is a direct reflection of the situation in the country. All 435 members of the House and thirty-two members of the Senate came up for re-election and re-election this fall. These men—particularly those in the House and particularly in an election year—keep close tab on the feeling of the people in their districts and States. Their independence of the White House wishes has a direct relationship to the diminished popular strength of the President. Senator Harrison, for example, knows that while his tax proposals may be offensive to Mr. Roosevelt, they are popular with the people who have become alarmed over the business slump, are increasingly skeptical of the soundness of the New Deal policies and are anxious to see business regain its health.

SO clearly has this been made apparent that no one in Congress is any longer afraid to assert himself against the Administration. They have ceased to fear reprisals either from the White House or from the voters as a consequence of independence. What it means is that the New Deal has played out; the poorer people, as was inevitable, are beginning to pay for its blundering stupidity and to realize that they have been led up a blind alley by an overconfident Executive, now confronted by problems with which he has not the capacity to deal, and never did.

It is not a pleasant situation to contemplate and there is a painful time ahead, but it is at least encouraging to realize that Congress has stopped following blindly and that the people are beginning to see the shoddiness and silliness of the doctrines so emotionally preached these last five years. It may be too late or it may not be too late to get back to safety, but the certain thing is that the Roosevelt deus in has passed. The practical men of the Administration are aware of this now. A suspicion of it has seeped into the White House itself, which accounts for a number of things.

PLAN NEW CUPBOARD
TO FIT EQUIPMENT
OF THE HOUSEHOLDBy Miss Edna Stephany
(Home Economics Representative)

"Shall we consider buying a ready-made cupboard or build one?" That is what some Pennsylvania rural homemakers are asking.

There are advantages to both, but if you decide on building a cupboard it may be planned to hold the utensils in hand and those needed at that working center.

If a cupboard is needed near the stove, make a list of all the dishes, utensils and supplies used there, such as covers, frying pans, vegetable serving dishes, tea, coffee, and cereals. Measure these and plan the cupboard to fit.

When building a work counter see that it is the correct height with two or three inches recessed for toe space. Thirty-six inches is usually a good average height. Twenty-four inches deep and 36 inches long is a comfortable size. Allow at least 15 inches between the working surface and the hanging cupboards above.

The shelves in the cupboard should be adjustable or the distance apart planned to fit certain dishes and supplies. Shelves will vary in width from 11 inches for plates to 4 to 5 inches for cups and glasses.

Plan pigeon holes or a vertical filing arrangement for platters, covers, trays and baking tins. Racks on the doors can hold small packaged supplies or knives.

The lower cabinet sections will include drawers and cupboards. Shallow drawers are most desirable especially for silver and cutlery and these may have removable partitions. Deeper drawers may have a sliding tray or upright partitions.

A sliding shelf, a rack on the door, or pigeon hole arrangement are suitable for the deep cupboard below the work surface.

The flour bin may be a separate drawer on casters which pulls out easily, or a shelf may be attached to the door to hold the flour container.

Plain cupboard doors without panels, such as those made of five or seven-ply wood, are easier to keep clean. If cupboards go to the ceiling, have two sets of doors, using the upper cupboard for storage.

A striking cross-section of life among ambitious girls from every walk of society who hitch their wagons to the stars, revealing their defeats, triumphs, heart-aches and heart-throbs, is woven into the thematic pattern of RKO Radio's "Stage Door," co-starring Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou, which opens today at the Bristol Theatre.

A society girl burning with ambition, sanguine in her belief that she will attain great heights in the theatre, makes friends with another girl, a night club hoofer. Together they share the heart-aches and disappointments of the typical stage aspirant.

The sudden suicide of a despondent friend awakens within the stage-struck hoofer a flaming determination to give an unforgettable performance as a monument to the memory of the departed girl. Like a bolt of lightning she sears Broadway with her inspired action.

DOCTOR

No one knows the importance of fast, dependable telephone service better than the doctor. For many of the calls he receives and many of those he makes are emergency calls. Frequently a precious life depends on the swift completion of a telephone call.

THERE are times when good telephone service is simply a convenience.

But there are other times when good service is a matter of life or death, as any doctor can cite.

That's one reason why we can't take chances on your service. We must have the best of equipment. Telephone people must be trained by years of experience on the job to maintain and operate it efficiently.

You can pick up a Bell telephone with confidence. If it's humanly possible to reach your party—across the street, across the state or across the continent—the call will go through!

ALUMNI WINS CLOSE GAME OVER FACULTY

(By "Hern" Corn)

Struggling desperately in the closing seconds to tie the ball game into a knot, the faculty basketball team were barely nosed out by the "Bob" Moore-managed Alumni, when the high school grads won the decision in a 29 to 25 score, last evening.

Although the teachers were on the short end of the score, they managed to handle the pill most of the fray. It was a Juenger-Gillard affair, with both sharing the top rate scoring honors. These two were the only tallies of the pedagogues until Buccanier, Charlie Boyd managed to wade through a few Alumni players as he was "whizzing" through the pages of a history assignment to account for a twin-counter.

From the shriek of the whistle to the final of the contest, words cannot describe the snappy and alert brand of ball that was played. In the first chucker the game immediately became "fiery" hot. On the initial tap-off, Spike (Lanky) Juenger towered up and ushered the ball into the eager and waiting mitts of "Zeke" Gillard, who tallied the first two counters to open up the scorebook. Then after Juenger took advantage of a gift toss, "Bill" Mignoni, second high point gatherer for the Alumni, retallied by making his foul register. Soon after this, Walt Fagan moved his early minute stride up to par when he tied the score at three-all, with his field goal. Each team tallied time and time again during this half, but not letting the other get too far ahead. At the end of the first 15 minutes the Alumni colors seemed to shine a little brighter than the faculty's—just three points brighter. Score at half: 14 to 11, Alumni.

The second half still showed more action. In the third period, however, it took two minutes before "Zeke" Gillard started the ball rolling with two points. Tallying in this came was few and far between. Nevertheless, the score kept on growing in the Alumni's favor.

Excitement and nervousness laid out the background for the last big grind of eight minutes. Juenger started it off when he gave the pill to Gillard who laid it away on a slimmer play. Then Nick Huffell retaliated and kept the margin between them the same. With two minutes to play, Coach Juenger accounted for two points and was followed by Huffell who let the pill sing the "swish" song to the net. Buccanier Charlie Boyd found his chance for everlasting glory and scored his double-decker.

Finding the teachers too near for comfort, Punky Zefferi let sail a twin-counter from the 30-foot mark. The score now read 23 to 27, with 15 seconds to go. At this time Steve Juenger tried to sneak through with two points and was fouled for two free shots. Think of the situation he was in: The Faculty would be eligible for a three-minute postscript if he made his foul throws good. In order to calm the team, Captain Tom Coles called a time-out. The stands went into an uproar with the suspense they were in. Then time was in. Versatile Steve stepped up and let the first one fly, and it was good. The other, however, just missed its mark and rolled out. That was the story, the Alumni led by Punk Zefferi, who amassed the sum of nine tallies, got the referees nod with a 29 to 25 score.

Next to Zefferi came Bill Mignoni, when he netted three field goals and four fouls for seven counters. Nick Huffell and Buck Proby were next in line with five and four points, respectively.

LOUIS THESZ TO MEET DYNAMITE JOE COX

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 16.—The outstanding wrestler in the game, Louis Thesz, St. Louis Hungarian, will meet his outstanding challenger, Dynamite Joe Cox, at the Arena tonight in a best two fall out of three, 90 minute time limit contest.

Thesz made his first appearance here last week and downed the vaunted Cliff Olson. He impressed the fans with his ability and courage against the mad Swede and he lived up to all the claims that preceded him. His new hold, a bone-bending arm-lock, is one of the most dangerous holds in the sport and he forced Olson to quit under the pressure. The 23-year-old American-Hungarian displayed championship form and the fans, who were skeptical when they heard he defeated Everette Marshall, went away believing everything they heard about Thesz.

Cox is one of the most dangerous grapplers in the game and he has always pleased local fandom. In his last appearance here he downed Joe Dusek to score a popular win.

Mike Mazurki, huge Manhattan College Pole, will vie with Jimmy Parker, former Black Secret, who was unmasked by Joe Cox last week in the semi-windup.

Andy Rascher, popular Indiana University athlete, will tackle Bobby Mamagoff, classy Chicago youngster, and Charley Strack, former Olympic champion, will face Geza Tako, popular Hungarian.

The first bout will start at 8:30 p. m. and ladies will be admitted free to the ringside section accompanied by a male escort.

SOUTHAMPTON WINS OVER BUCKINGHAM FIVE

By Louis Tomlinson

SOUTHAMPTON, Mar. 16.—Being outscored, 3 to 1, at the recess period in their struggle with Southampton, Buckingham High put on a spirited third quarter drive that brought them from far behind to within reach of the Grayhounds, 26-19, at the close of the session, but it wasn't enough to overcome the home five's tremendous lead over the Buccaneers. As a result of that handicap, the Blue and Gold quintet dropped by the wayside with three other teams in the first round of play in the fight for the Bucks County "Class B" championship. The final score in this tilt played at the local high school gym last night was, 29-20.

Seventy Prints Shown By WPA Photographic School

The WPA Bridgewater School of Photography displayed seventy 8"x10" prints on 14"x18" white mounts, last evening and visitors from near and distant points were unstinted in praise for the quality and beauty of pictures produced by the amateurs who were responsible for the entries.

By request the showing is continued until this evening.

Twelve ribbons were awarded, one each for first, second and third places, and nine for honorable mention:

First prize: "Three of a Kind," John A. Poulette, Bristol.

Second, "Shadows in Washington," Hugh Robeson.

Third, "Tranquil Lilies," Hugh Robeson.

Honorable mention: "Spring Thaw," "Here's to the Sea," "Tentacles," John A. Poulette; "The Glen," Hugh Robeson; "We're Ready," Norman Miller, Croydon; "Scotty," C. Guthrie, Philadelphia; "Cohabitation," Earl Tomlinson, Bristol; "Self," Samuel O. Troutman; "Switch Off," Farrell Morrell, Langhorne.

The exhibition will be moved to Newtown and on Monday those interested will have a chance to view the pictures at 22 South State street.

ASKED TO AMEND ORDINANCE

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 16.—Borough Council has been asked to amend its new zoning ordinance so that the Bell Telephone Company can have the right to erect one or more "central offices" in the town if necessary in the future. Under the new ordinance this is prohibited. Council members admit this was an error and will take steps to grant the request.
